

Thomas Fairchild Community School - a bright and colourful lunch time experience

Following a devastating fire our new school has been rebuilt and offers a bright and colourful dining experience with cafe style dining. Our light and airy dining space wouldn't be out of place in a central London art gallery or museum and offers a contemporary but relaxed dining stage. Complemented with colourful seating and a mixture of benches and tables we have the flexibility for children and teaching staff to eat together in comfort. At Thomas Fairchild we have made our lunch time an extension of the class room and encourage conversation between school staff and the pupils.

The state of the art kitchen has given us the tools for our chef Habibah to create mouth-watering meals with the use of high-tech combination ovens and an amazing bulk cooking bratt pan which makes cooking large quantities of meat and vegetables a breeze. Getting the kitchen design right first time is essential to ensure a professional working environment and taking advice from our catering adviser at Health Education Partnership has ensured we are always heading in the right direction.
